

Color a Bald Eagle!

Bald eagles eat fish, which makes Jamestown Island in the James River a perfect home for them. The early colonists wrote about seeing eagles, and archaeologists have found eagle bones in James Fort, showing that the colonists even ate them! Eagles also appear on some of the man-made artifacts from the fort. Thanks to 20th-century conservation efforts, today's visitors can still see bald eagles at Jamestown.

Once you have finished coloring the eagle, have an adult show you a photo by visiting:
